Preventing & coping with difficult children during a lesson

This practical and fun Seminar looks at what we, as swim teachers can do to prevent and cope with difficult behaviour from children (and parents) during lessons. We will look at how the ingredients of:

- ❑ our teaching environment
- ❑ our teaching methods - especially positioning and communication
- ❑ lesson plan, content, pace & structure
- ❑ child development theory – physical, cognitive, social, emotional
- ❑ parenting styles
- ❑ the rewards or consequences that we give

All combine together to affect the behaviour that is 'cooked-up' during lessons.

Teaching Workshop

This practical and highly interactive workshop will help you to:

- ❑ determine the behaviours and performance standards you want from your teachers with regard to the factors which affect the behaviour of the children (and parents) in their classes
- ❑ develop stimulating and effective training for the above
- ❑ develop a process and documentation for monitoring and improving your teacher's performance in this area

You will get the most benefit from this Workshop if you have first attended the Teaching Seminar (as described above), with your teachers, as the material we cover in the Seminar will be built upon (by managers and supervisors) in this Teaching Workshop.

I have just been through change with associated problems which could have been averted had I been to this workshop before the change. It was a very informative and interactive workshop and showed me how I can do it better next time I need to change [which will be soon]. The pro and con method was exactly what I needed and I would recommend anyone contemplating change to attend." Sue Pryor of Sue Pryor Swimming in Strathalbyn, SA
